About the Book

Aurobindo Ghosh was a brilliant champion of Indian philosophical tradition. After serving a satisfying career in politics from 1905 to 1910, he devoted himself entirely to spiritual and yogic exercises at Pondicherry. The relevance of Aurobindo's thought could be summarised in the ideas of Spiritual Nationalism, vision of Freedom, ideals of Passive Resistance and Integral Yoga. He imagined nationalism in terms of human unity and summarised it as realisation of the souls. Sri Aurobindo's seminal work on Indian culture prompted the French Nobel Laureate Roman Rolland to call him as the greatest thinker of modern India and a bridge between East and West. He remained as one of the leading Indian philosophers who represented India in the lights of peace and global harmony to the outside World.
